

My Life

By: Jerri Tuma

Special Education Teacher

When I grow up I want to be a Special Education Teacher. I want to teach special education because I want a job that would feel rewarding at the end of the day.

A Special Education Teacher usually works the normal school hours. There are unpleasant aspects to this job. You must produce a lot of paper work to show progress and work under the threat of litigation against the school or district by the parents.

To be a Special Education Teacher you must have at least a bachelor's degree and completion of an approved training program in Special Education Teaching.

The average Special Education earns from $38,910-$62,640 a year.

Coach

I also want to be a Coach. I love sports, but with my height it's a little bit hard to play. So coaching a team would give me a chance to still be in a game.

They have irregular works hours, because they have to have morning practices and/or afternoon practices.

They either work indoors or outdoors depending on the sport they are coaching. Coaches receive a lot of verbal abuse by fans, other coaches, and athletes.

Immense overall knowledge of the game, usually acquired through years of experience at lower levels. One of the many good opportunities that come with this job is that you get to work with kids to help them learn about the game. A bad part of this job is the length of the season and off season.

Landscape Architects

They work regular hours, may work overtime to meet a deadline.

Landscape Architects work inside office making plans and designs. They also work outside on the project.

You must have a bachelor's or master's degree in landscaping.

There should be good prospects for landscape architects overall, but opportunities may depend on geographic location.